

MyZuzah Moments - April 19, 2024

Our team rolled and packed up 600 mezuzahs this week, preparing to bridge the gap in supply that we usually experience around Passover, when sofrim take a break from writing. All the better, since we try to avoid crunchy matzo crumbs inside our mezuzahs...

MyZuzah received a really nice treatment in the blog of our friend, former Hillel, Federation, and JCC executive (is that bingo?) Keith Dvorchik, who shared how mezuzot evoke his personal connections and enhance meaningful memories from his life. Keith has worked all over the U.S. and has friends everywhere, so we are grateful for his recognition and help in sharing our message!

Partner Updates:

Rabbi Uri Topolosky of Kehilat Pardes in Rockville, MD, began working with a family whose middle school-aged son has recently become more engaged in his Judaism, and he wanted to put up mezuzot in their home. Thanks to MyZuzah, he was able to put up his first mezuzah, and the family is working on purchasing enough for the rest of their home. They were so grateful and we made his day!

In Offenbach-am-Main (near Frankfurt), Germany, Rabbi Yaakov Barasch has been helping his community reengage with their Jewish identity. Even though Germany has been supportive of their Jewish communities in recent years, some individuals are still afraid to show off their Judaism in public. You may notice that two of the mezuzahs below are covered in a nondescript white box, disguising the mezuzah as a utility box.

It is still good to know these Jews chose to have a mezuzah on their homes!

Recipient Messages:

I came across Myzuzah on instagram. I just moved to New York and was in need of a mezuzah. Now thankfully, my front door has a mezuzah, and I'm working on the rest of the doorways of my house. I'm so happy! Emily Esserman, New York, NY
