

MyZuzah Moments - August 22, 2022

Following the recent coverage of our domestic violence project in EJewishPhilanthropy (click to read if you haven't yet!), we received several inquiries from individuals and new potential partners. Here is a sample of these notes of impact:

*Part of the insidiousness of domestic violence is that it robs women of our voices. No one I know imagined what I was coping with behind our front door. In public my ex husband presents an agreeable persona. In private he was emotionally and psychologically abusive for years, and ended up punching me 3 times. He was arrested. Now in my late 50s, with multiple physical challenges (legally blind for one), I have begun the next phase of my life. A mezuzah through you would be a beautiful way to bring kedusha to my new home. *I just mailed a mezuzah to a very happy client! She's so excited about receiving it for her new home. The client is in her late 40's, she is an African-American Jew, and she has two children, ages 17 and 21. She recently fled to the Bay Area to escape severe physical abuse in another state and is working on restarting her life (albeit in hiding from her ex). From MyZuzah was also featured in the Jewish News of Arizona, highlighting our two JFCS partners on the ground in Arizona. We are very pleased with the coverage so far, and there will be more to come!

We are planning on an event in Chicago in March of 2023, where synagogue families from Congregation Anshe Emet will provide mezuzot to some of the 1,800 Holocaust survivors living in their area. The survivors living there are predominantly Russian-speaking, and we are working on our joint promotional materials now!

Last week, we were honored to solicit and receive a significant investment to support our efforts to serve Jews in the Southern U.S. – specifically North Florida, South Carolina, East Tennessee, and Alabama. If any of you have contacts in communities in those regions, please let us know!

Partner Updates:

In Hannover, Germany, the Chabad house under Rebbetzin Shterni Wolff is preparing a pre-holiday campaign.
